This curious picture was sent to me by a lady in England who was taking a photograph of her dog in an obviously advanced state of relaxation and ended up with the fuzzy figure of what appears to be an older child looking as though he or she is trying to play with the animal. Like most “spirit photos,” she claims that no one was standing over the sleeping dog at the time she took the photo, and there’s no evidence of it being either a double exposure or motion blur as the metafile data does not indicate a long exposure time. Besides, one would have to move very quickly—even with a considerable exposure time—to get this effect. I also can find no evidence of trickery in the photo, and the lady who sent the photo says that she and her family have been experiencing considerable paranormal activity in the home over the last few months.

If real, it appears the apparition may naturally have been attracted to the snoozing critter on the couch and perhaps was even trying to pick it up! All in all, a great shot. (Photo used with permission. All rights reserved.)
